The Question of Parity. To the Editor of The Evening Star:

Should our government coin silver fre and return it to the original owner without maintaining the parity between silver and

How could the parity be maintained? In other words, should I take my old silver teapot, spoons and forks to the mint and have them coined into the form of dollars, and attempt to put them in circulation without first having the government agree to redeem them in gold when presented, who would take them and give me merchandise in return, except at the commercial value of silver, whatever that might be? Not a man in this country with comon sense would do it.

Now, if what our greatest financier, the Now, if what our greatest financier, the senior Senator from Ohio, John Sherman, has told us be true, namely, that this country will not assume responsibility for silver coined free, what will such so-called money be worth as a circulating medium? In my humble judgment, it would be worth very little more than the confederate with very little more than the confederate shin-plasters were during the late war, when a boy was paid $5 for holding a horse five minutes, and poor women were compelled to pay $100 for a calico dress.

Far better rélegate the free silver men to some barren isle, and there let them remain till Gabriel blows his trumpet.

Judge Scott.

Most of the Charges Were Those Drunkenness, Disorderly and Vagrancy.

"Hezekiah," said one of the police victims in the toils this morning to a young colored man, who was in the sweat box with him, "I sees dat we ain't gwine ter coffee, and a tin cup of the beverage was handed in between the bars to each of the sixteen victims.

"Dis is great stuff to give a man when he's roasted nearly to death," ventured one of the prisoners. "What's the matter with

The caterer had no iced tea, however, and Policeman Flynn assured the prisoners that the coffee would stimulate them and do them more good than cold beverages. It is certain that none of them refused the cof-fee, and when the caterer's work was finished the prisoners were turned loose in the pen, and Judge Scott's court was opened.

The First Case. In this court Policemen Evans and Ellis had more cases than any other officers, but their victims had done nothing more serious than make an effort to keep cool, and in doing this they had stood on the street corner.

James Parker, William Barnes and John St. Clair, young colored men, were defend-ants in the first case. St. Clair has but one leg and one of the other men has a disabled remarked the court, after hearing the evidence of the ether officer, and you may go. What about your striking the woan?' St. Clair was asked.

"These men have been loitering about the mouth of Logan's court," said one of 'he officers, "and neighbors have complained of the loud talking there."

"Did you hear them doing any loud talk-ing." Judge Scott wanted to know.
"I didn't hear any bad talk," Policeman Evans answered, "but I was told that St. Clair had struck a girl with his cane and cut her ear half off." "There's nothing against the other two."

"I didn't strike the woman," he answered. The police had detained the two young men who had been acquitted, and they said that they saw him use his cane on the woman's head.

"Is this proof sufficient?" St. Clair asked the court. "If I hit the woman, why didn't they bring her here and charge me with assault?" "That's another matter," remarked the Evidence was given to show that pool coms and saloons in the vicinity of New fersey avenue and L streets are frequented by young colored men. "You are fined five dollars," the court told St. Clair, and he went down in default

One Discharged and One Fined. When Aloysius Campbell and Cornelia

Storking appeared on a similar charge the same officers gave evidence in the case. "The girl was there on the street, but she wasn't doing anything," the policeman said.

"If she didn't do anything she ought not be here," the court remarked, "and she is discharged." is a gentlemanly appearing young colored man, denied that he had been disorderly.

"I was standing out on the corner," he said, "but I wasn't doing any loud talking. It was rather warm in the house and I thought I'd go out and get a breath of air ' "Judge, your honor," said Lawyer Ricks, "these people live in small houses in alleys, and during these hot nights it is hard for them to remain in their houses. Certainly they should be allowed to stand on the street and keep cool."

"That is their right," said Judge Scott,
"and during this hot weather the court
makes an effort to be lenient with these people."
"Perhaps if your honor will take his personal bonds it will be a warning to him," said counsel, "and he will not stand about on the streets."

"In some cases personal bonds may do good," the court said, "but in this case the police say they have warned this young man a number of times, and I am going to The fine was paid and he was discharged.

Bertha Finally Fined.

Bertha Addison, who is also known as Alberta Anderson, is a young colored girl who lives in Logan's court, and last night and Washington Steamboat Company she was caught in the drag net operated by Policemen Evans and Ellis.

"So many complaints have been received about the disorderly crowds about the corner," said Officer Evans, "that last night we gave the corner our individual attention, and this girl was there with seve "Did you arrest any of the men?"

The young defendant made a hot weather excuse, and as there was not much against her, the judge said he would take her personal bonds. "But there's another charge against her."

said the officer. "Susie Hunnicutt swore out a warrant against her several days ago, and we were not able to catch her."
Susie related her complaint against her former companion, and Lawyer Ricks asked her if she was acquainted with William Chambers.

"Yes, sir," was her response.

"Was he your beau?"

"No, sir," was her response, "but I respected him the same as I do any other man of manners." "Now, tell the truth," said counsel;
"didn't you have trouble with Bertha because Chambers loved her better than he did you?" "Of course not," she answered. "'Cause never loved him."

"But he used to visit you?"

"Who said so?" retorted the girl. "He never visited me."
"Then you visited him?"
"Deed I didn't, he lived at my aunt's and of course I used to visit her."
"There are two charges against you," the court told Alberts elies Borths "At the court told Alberta, alias Bertha. "At first I was disposed to release you on your good behavior, but now you will have to pay a $2 fine." "Fen" Brown, a "Foggy Bottom" colored man, had the good sense to remain away from court and not hear what his wife Mary had to say about him.

Mrs. Nolan Acquitted. Mary charged that Cecelia Nolan, colored, and her three daughters had not alienated the affections of the husband and father, but that they caused him to spend his spare change "rushing the

"And when I went to their house." said Mary, "I got a warm reception."

She charged that the four members of the Mary, "I got a warm reception."

She charged that the four members of the Nolan family had used the vilest language imaginable towards her, and she had several neighbors in court to corroborate her statement. But they failed to corroborate. "I never drank five cents' worth of her husband's beer in my life," said Mrs. Nolan, "and the neighbors who know me will tell you that I don't use any such language."

Her daughters also made denials, and the court acquitted them of the charge.

That John Duffy is not wearing striped clothes on the farm is no fault of M. J. Flemming. The latter made an effort to have Judge Scott send him down, but the judge does not send workingmen down without a full hearing.

"I'm a stone cutter by trade," said John, "and yesterday was the first day's work I had had in six weeks."

"And got drunk?"

"Tell you the truth, your honor," said

SIXTEEN IN THE PEN the prisoner, "I drew a little change and did take a few drinks."
"Where did you get your liquor?"
"Got most of it from that man there," he responded, pointing to Flemming.
"I'm not disposed to send you down if you are working." remarked the court are working," remarked the court.

Flemming, however, did not like the idea of Duffy being released, and volunteered another statement. This did not effect the court, for the unfortunate man's personal onds were taken.

"Yes, I said she was another," was that "Yes, I said she was another, was that Maggie Tolson, colored, said, "because she called me a ——"
"That's not the way you should do," the court told her. "Because another the court told her. "Because another woman does wrong that furnishes you no excuse for doing likewise. You are "Five dollars," blated out the woman. "I haven't got that much money, and didn't think I was going to get fined."

"Step back." Too Fond of Liquor. In the procession was a one-legged young man named Richard Smith, and against him was a charge of vagrancy. "Why I should be charged with such ar offense I don't know," he said. "He gets drunk and lies about on the sidewalk," said Policeman Riley, "and yesterday he followed me about and made me arrest him."

"I'm afraid, young man, that you are too fond of liquor," the court said. "You will have to go down for fifteen days." Clara Beckett was the last one tried.
The charge against her was disorderly.
She said guilty, and went back singing,
"Just tell them that you saw me." Fifteen days was her sentence.

THE COCKING MURDER.

Elymet Dows Thinks Certain Information Was Given by Lynchers.

To the Editor of The Evening Star: Your special dispatch from La Plata August 6, relating to the Cocking murder is a most untruthful one, and is, no doubt, written by or in the interest of the lynchers of Joseph Cocking, who, now realizing the enormity of their cowardly and brutal crime, seek to influence public opinion in their behalf.

It is a well-authenticated fact that Button Neal was drowned while bathing, his clothes being found on the bank, dry, and no marks on his person to show foul play, and it is also well known that Mr. Cocking was not at the creek during that day. All tine evidence produced shows the usual amicable relationship between Mr. and Mrs. Cocking on the day previous to the murder up to 9 o'clock in the evening, the last seen of them.

Is it not somewhat strange that those two ladies who heard those threats, and by their presence only prevented this murder at that time, should have never mentioned the fact until row? Your correspondent can and will, no doubt, give the names of those ladies, so that the truth of his as-sertion can be verified. The charge of "statements made derogatory to the dead woman" by the friends of Cocking is en-tirely and utterly false in every particular. In regard to Mrs. Millar surrendering her opinion, that, too, is untrue. Mrs. Millar told the writer, most emphatically, that she had not done so, and considered Joseph Cocking's murder as atrocious as that of her daughter, and the first intimation she had of his lynching was on the evening after, when herself and son were on their after, when herself and son were on their way to visit him.

Also, in your letter from Cox's station of the same date, your correspondent, after commenting on the bad character of Matthews, the alleged murderer of Irwin, says: "He is another Cocking, so the people here think, and no one has any sympathy to waste on him." Now, so far as Cocking's character is concerned, until this sad affair, it was the equal of that of any man in this community, and no man today can conscientiously by he is the murderer of his wife and her sister. I have it on the authority of two lawyers of the it on the authority of two lawyers of the state, who have carefully considered the case, that the evidence against him is not even circumstantial, but of the most filmsy character, and that they believe him innocent of the charge.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

Business Transacted at the Regular Meeting of the Federation.

The Eight-Hour Test Case Believed to Be a Good One-The Building Trades Council.

The regular weekly meeting of the Federation of Labor was held last evening. President James F. McHugh having re turned to the city, occupied the chair, and Mr. C. A. Maldens was secretary. The roll call was dispensed with, owing to the heat. Credentials were received from Butchers' Assembly, No. 6,341; the Bridge and Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers' and Shoe Clerks' Assembly, and he delegates were seated. The committee appointed at a former meeting to investigate the alleged violation of the eight-hour law by Contractor Winfree on the Wallach School reported that the carpenters and laborers were employed nine hours; that they had secured witnesses, had a warrant sworn out and served against the contractor, and that the case would be tried before a jury. The committee stated that it was the opinion of District Attorney Birney that a good case had been made out against the contractor, and that he believed a conviction would be had. It was stated that Mr. Millowney had ably prosecuted the violation of the law against Contractor McVeagh, and that he was well able to handle this case with-out aid from the federation's attorney. The emergency clause, it was stated, cannot be taken advantage of in this case, for the reason that an extension of time has many reason that an extension of time has many times been granted to contractors on similar work. The federation hopes that a violation has at last been found that will enable them to test the law. The same constant is provided to have been violating tractor is reported to have been violating the law on the new school building now be-ing erected on North Capitol street. At the request of the shoe clerks, a com-reported that they held a meeting last Sat-urday, that they also hold the charter of 118, and that they are not represented in the Central Labor Union. The Pressmen's Union reported that they had placed the Metropolitan railroad on the unfair list.

The labor bureau committee invited the delegates of the federation to attend a meeting of their committee at their hall next Saturday night.

Seven of the building trades were represented last night at the weekly meeting of the Building Trades' Council. It having been reported at a previous meeting that galvanized from workers objectionable to the Galvanized Iron Workers' Union are employed at Heurich's brewery, the man-agement was informed of the fact, and at

The secretary of the council was instructed to communicate with the Bricklayers' Union, and request in behalf of the council that the union appoint a steward for the work, who will ascertain the standing of the employes, and upon his report efforts will be made to have all "unfair" labor removed.

The Late John W. Stahl.

John W. Stahl, whose death from the effects of the heat, together with heart failure, was announced yesterday, had been a resident of South Washington since 1861. He came here from Harper's Ferry, where he was born, and where he had worked in the rifle factory for several years. In June, 1561, he was employed at the United States arsenal as a machinist under Mr. George Vright, while General Ramsey was in charge of the arsenal. He was also engineer at the Agricultural Department for some years. For the past ten years he had been employed as a machinist in the ord-nance department of the Washington navy yard, where he commanded the respect of those in authority by reason of his skill and workmanship. Deceased was a member of Ryland M. E. Church, where for several years he had held official positions. He was also a member of Union Lodge, I. O. O. F., and of Magenenu Encampment. He leaves a widow, two sons and three daughters and a brother, T. B. Stahl of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Mary E. Wilson of Hartford. Conn. His funeral took place from Ryland Chapel this afternoon at 8 o'clock. Reynolds Post's Lawn Fete. The second night of the John F. Reynolds Post, No. 6, lawn fete, which is being held at the corner of 14th street and Howard avenue, in Mt. Pleasant, was well attended, and the committee in charge is highly pleased over the sum which will be added to the relief fund of the post from the proceeds of the venture. The grounds were decorated and lighted as on the first night and an excellent program of literary and musical numbers was rendered during the course of the evening. A brief talk was made by Capt. P.
